Staying Connected . . . A Word from Wes

Dear friends,

While this coronavirus pandemic is keeping us from scheduling in-person events, I'm grateful we can connect via our newsletter. On behalf of the LAHS Board of Directors, we hope you and your family and friends are doing well during these challenging times.

As many of you know, Carole Williams has been a loyal and devoted LAHS volunteer for many years publishing our newsletter on a quarterly basis. Carole did an outstanding job and I was very sad to hear that she would not be continuing in that capacity. She will be missed and on behalf of the board and the entire membership, I express sincere my gratitude and best wishes to her. I'd also like to thank Dee Bigham for taking over the newsletter responsibilities. We welcome her to the LAHS team!

While we have throttled back to an idle during these past months the Board is operating in the background so we can pick up right where we left off when it is safe to schedule meetings again.

Until then, we'll keep you informed of LAHS actions and events via our newsletter and email messages. Be well, stay safe and let us know if we may help you out you in any way.

Best regards,

Wes

Looking to precedent for lessons

Plagues and pandemics, the earliest recorded in 430 BC, have changed history: the Justinian Plague is 541 AD is credited with spurring the spread of Christianity, leprosy-focused hospitals were built when leprosy grew into a pandemic in the 11th century, in 2019 research has concluded that the deaths of some 56 million Native Americans in the 16th and 17th centuries, largely through disease, may have altered the Earth's climate as vegetation growth on previously tilled land drew more CO₂ from the atmosphere and caused a cooling event. Is there anything we can learn as we look back over history?

1918 SPANISH FLU

The avian-borne flu that resulted in 50 million deaths worldwide, the 1918 flu was first observed in Europe, the United States and parts of Asia before swiftly spreading around the world. At the time, there were no effective drugs or vaccines to treat this killer flu strain, our knowledge about medicine and infectious disease was nowhere near what we know today. Wire service reports of a flu outbreak in Madrid in the spring of 1918 led to the pandemic being called the "Spanish flu."

By October, hundreds of thousands of Americans died and body storage scarcity hit crisis level. But the flu threat disappeared in the summer of 1919 when most of the infected had either developed immunities or died.

1957 ASIAN FLU

Starting in Hong Kong and spreading throughout China and then into the United States, the Asian flu became widespread in England where, over six months, 14,000 people died. A second wave followed in early 1958, causing an estimated total of about 1.1 million deaths globally, with 116,000 deaths in the United States alone. A vaccine was developed, effectively containing the pandemic.

1918 HIV/AIDS

Treatments have been developed to slow the progress of the disease, but 35 million people worldwide have died of AIDS since its discovery, and a cure is yet to be found.

Once this current epidemic has subsided many of the same questions asked after the 1918 influenza will remain. Why do some recover and others don't? What can we learn from a public-health crisis? What follows might be completely different from what we have known. In the past, cataclysmic events have prompted human beings to act with extraordinary kindness, courage and ingenuity. Let's hope we see the same now.

After all of this is over what really will have mattered is how well we treated each other.

With several directors retiring, we're looking to add a few conscientious board members to help lead and strengthen the Society, seeking one individual in particular who likes to work with numbers. To that end, President Wes Tippins has asked Bill Barton and Paul Nix to serve as a recruiting task force to seek out and nominate individuals to join the Board.

If you're interested in serving or if you know someone who would be a good board member, please contact Bill or Paul:
